English AP Language & Composition Students:

Continue to check GoogleClassroom for updates each week as we move into honing skills of rhetoric, argumentation, and synthesis.

For Week 1: The following three readings are posted on GoogleClassroom: "The Best Pizza in the World," "How It Feels to be Colored Me," and "Me Talk Pretty One Day."

For "The Best Pizza in the World," you have a writing prompt.
For "How It Feels to be Colored Me," you have a writing prompt.
For "Me Talk Pretty One Day," you have a writing prompt.

Those three prompts focus on the rhetorical analysis and argumentative essays. Please do not spend longer than 30-40 minutes on each of the writing prompts.

For "The Best Pizza in the World," I have included a question for you to answer in a discussion format. Please remember to include thesis/claim, evidence, commentary for both your initial and subsequent responses.

For "How It Feels to Be Colored Me" and "Me Talk Pretty One Day," I have included a question for you to answer as well in which you have two options. You only have to choose one option, but if you would like you can complete both options.

I am also creating a space (question) if you need to ask a question or if you want to discuss.

I will update the website as needed. This material should be considered work for the week of March 16, 2020 even though I have a due date of April 20, 2020 on it. Other assignments will be posted in the upcoming days.

If you have any questions, feel free to email me at chadwick.mcelveen@lpsb.org.

Be safe--and see you soon,

Mr. McElveen
